Pastor Sarah Sedgwick

"Great is Thy faithfulness, O God my Father, there is no shadow of turning with Thee; Thou changest not, thy compassions, they fail not as thou hast been thou forever wilt be."

"Great is Thy Faithfulness" is one of my favorite hymns. Often, it's the hymn I find myself humming on and off throughout my day. I like it because it reminds me (and us) that God NEVER changes, even if the world around us does.

The weather is changing. 80-degree, sunny weather is turning to 60-degree, rainy weather. The leaves change color reminding us that we are in the season of Fall. Pumpkins, gourds, and apples are selling out at the local farmer's markets as families decorate their dining room tables.

Families are pulling out past Halloween costumes to see which ones might still fit the younger children in the family. Fathers add glitter to their daughters' fairy costumes and brothers wear their creepiest mask so they might scare their mother in the house.

It's not only the weather changing, though. Our lives change, too. A new pastoral position begins after saying goodbye to the church I've served. Lewistown PC welcomes another interim pastor for a season of time. You have said goodbye to a beloved church member as I prepare to officiate the wedding of another.

Changes can be daunting; exciting; needed; and necessary. And so often change happens in the midst of all the ordinary things that seem to not change.

I'm grateful for a season of change that allows me to join your congregation and serve in Lewistown. Already I have been a witness to the dedication and commitment this church expresses while helping God's children.

It's been a joy to walk to my church office surrounded by the chatter of little children, to be able to help a gentleman in need of help with a grocery card and a time of prayer, and to walk into meetings where the deacons and elders are taking care of the "business" of the church with energy and smiles.

Life changes—in good ways and difficult ways—and what a blessing to be able to deal with those changes together as God's beloved children. And thanks be to God that God's love never changes for us. God's love is constant. God will always be present to us and for us forever and ever.

We know this about God's love, but sometimes in the changes and busyness of life and its demands upon our hearts, souls, and minds, we start forgetting the truth of God's abiding love for God's precious children. We can't really stop change from happening, but we can turn to the One who never changes and trust that God will never, ever fail us.

One of my favorite Christian singers is Nichole Nordeman. In one of her songs, aptly named "Seasons," she writes about the changing seasons, against a God that never changes.

"And even when the trees have just surrendered to the harvest time. Forfeiting their leaves in late September and sending us inside. Still I notice You when change begins and I am braced for colder winds. I will offer thanks for what has been and what's to come; You are autumn."

Thank you, God, for changes we experience and the unchanging love you give to us all!

OUR HALLOWEEN PARTY

Rev. Robert Zorn, Minister of Visitation

Every fall, just about six weeks into the new school year at our little one room school, when it was beginning to look as though our educational process would deteriorate into terminal boredom, something happened to bring fresh vitality to our student body. Our teacher, Miss Sarah Wiggins, would announce that on the last Friday of October we would have a Halloween Party. This announcement would bring forth a season of great excitement. Hundreds of sheets of black construction paper would be cut into patterns of black cats, witches, and other appropriate shapes. The most popular designs would show a black cat on a picket fence and the form of a witch riding a broom across the face of a harvest moon. Girls would begin to wear colorful ribbons in their hair, and the boys would begin to construct all sorts of noise makers with which they thought they might scare people.

On the day of our party, we would be dismissed early for our lunch so we could run home and get our costumes and return to the school for the festivities. Many of the costumes consisted of a simple paper bag pulled down over a person's face. A lot of the boys would tie a bandana over their face to look like a desperate outlaw. Girls concentrated on movie star style hairdos and more ribbons.

Among the games we played were "find the eraser" which our teacher would hide in plain sight. Apples would be hung from the stage curtain wire. Bigger boys and tall girls had the advantage of catching the apples with their teeth. Then there was the old "eat five crackers and be the first to whistle game." A talent show of a sort took place with the lower grade kids doing simple acrobatics with a broomstick or a jump rope. Some of the older students would recite "pieces" or read appropriate poetry. The four girls in my class would try to imitate radio personalities whom they had heard. One girl played a guitar and belted out a heart breaking rendition of "Old Shep." Then there would be cider and a cookie for everyone. After about an hour of such activities we were dismissed to go home. Although it was not spelled out for us, the lessons of the day for us were: 1) Have fun, but do not make fun of others 2) Help one another and share 3) Respect your elders...and 4) Be home before dark.

Costumes and masks did not hide any identities. It was known that the Pringles and Beckers came over Jimtown Hill, the Goodwins used the main Dawson road, the Zorns and McKnights would arrive by the Cemetery lane. We were all known by the roads we traveled.

So it should be with our lives. We come from various directions, but with one goal and purpose. That purpose is to enjoy our fellowship and faith, not just for a day, but for every day of our lives, in our church and wherever we are on God's good earth.

PRESCHOOL PAGE

Ginny Westover, Preschool Director

During the first circle time on the first day of the school week, our preschool classes unveil the “wonderful word of the week.” Each word is an important thread that weaves its way through the day and ties into the theme of the month. We recite the Wonderful Word of the Week out loud, write it, clap its syllables, define it, and return to the word many times throughout our daily activities. Besides adding breadth to our ABC wall, these “W,W,Ws” help strengthen vocabulary. Many of these weekly words help strengthen character, as well (some by virtue of the persistence it takes to pronounce them! “Entomologist”, for example). Our current Wonderful Word of the Week is not difficult to pronounce, but it can certainly be difficult to live out. “Grateful” is the newest WWW. Frogstreet Curriculum defines grateful as “appreciating what you have.” It’s a great word to help prepare us for the upcoming holiday season (and a great attitude to live by all year round!).

Cultivating gratitude is a continual process that goes way beyond a single season. Many seeds of kindness, thankfulness, love and humility must be sown along the way. Parents and grandparents, we are grateful for the values you are instilling in your children/grandchildren! What a joy to already see the evidence of this sowing! In a culture where entitlement is a prevalent attitude, teachers’ hearts smile when we hear, “Yes, please” and “Thank you” and comments like, “This cold water tastes SO good!” and “I’m glad you’re my friend.” Or the sweet sentence spoken by one little friend as she handed a well-loved doll back to its mama: “Thank you for letting me hold your baby!” Spontaneous cries of, “Thank you, (name), for bringing this snack!” are common around our snack-time tables. And the practice of “hugs all around” at dismissal time leaves no doubt that the children are grateful for each of their friends!

Applesauce Day left Pre-K-ers grateful for yummy, colorful apples, our sense of smell and taste, eyes to see the beautiful star inside the apple and our hardworking, helper moms and grandmoms! We are grateful for all of the chopping, mopping, cooking, stirring, squishing and cleaning up that you did! Thank you, thank you, Alexa, Jenn, and Kelsey, Donna, Jenna, and Leslie!

We are SO enjoying the big screen in the classroom and use it every day! We love watching video clips and singing with YouTube! What a wonderful tool to help us learn! We are grateful for the generosity of the Merry family!

Each of our families give us many reasons to be grateful! It took us a number of circle times to finish sharing our “Family Photos” with the class, but we enjoyed seeing the pictures of our friends and their moms, dads, brothers, sisters, relatives, and pets. It was so interesting to hear of the places our friends had traveled to and the activities they enjoy doing with their families! The children grew in their ability to speak in front of their classmates and in their ability to use a confident voice. They also learned to show respect to their friends by listening and waiting patiently for their turn. We were so proud of each student! Grateful, too, for the time that moms, dads, and grands took to work on the project with their child!

November will give us many more opportunities to express our gratefulness. We look forward to Grandparent’s Day, and of course, Thanksgiving! Here in the classroom, we plan to begin everyday as we always do, singing our gratitude to God for the new day he’s given us. And while “wonderful word of the day” doesn’t have nearly the same rhythmic ring of “wonderful word of the week”, we will strive to place “grateful” in that category and cultivate that attitude in our lives.

FRANCIS & LEAH DAYTEC—PHILIPPINES

There is a shifting in the air and sea here in Mindoro, a turning of the seasons. I (Leah) am from a land of four seasons, and my soul has taught me that hearts and nature grow and flourish through seasons and not in spite of them. I've felt the biting-cold grip of death in winter seasons of my soul, when it feels as though the sun will never shine again, and hope is thin that anything green could possibly spring up from these dark places. I've tasted spring, when green shoots of new life break through the frozen ground and teach me to breathe again. I've felt the sun on my face in the summer season, when life is a dance of joy, and laughter bursts and bubbles from deep wells. I've walked mountain roads in Autumn seasons, when loves, lives, and relationships are drawing to a close, and they float down on the wind like crimson leaves saying goodbye.

Here in the Philippines, there are two seasons: Amihan and Habagat-- the Northeast Monsoon and the Southwest Monsoon-- both marked by shifting wind patterns that bring rain and cooler air, or humid hotter air currents. This time of year the winds are shifting, the sea currents become tumultuous and collide with each other, and where the tide was once still, it now crashes on the rocks with fury. The winds collide at night and roar over the tops of Palm trees, and we lay in bed wondering if we will wake to a roof over our heads.

As with nature, so it is with souls. Right now our souls, our lives, feel a lot like we're in the middle of waves and wind.

I love our life. I full-on love the wackadoo circus of family and learning, serving, and all the fullness of the beautiful people God has given us in this land that is now home.

We continue to go deeper into relationship with the local Mangyan tribal people, and partner with them through discipleship, empowerment, community development, health care, and learning together how to find sustainable ways of rising out of cycles of poverty. Francis spends time daily with Mangyan leaders. The beauty of this partnership is that it is coming out of love, relationship, honor and respect. All serving must begin there.

We are planning towards building a birth center more central to many of the Mangyan villages that have no access to maternity or health care. Poverty is a spirit and a mindset, and we have come to learn that our Mangyan friends are some of the richest on earth, and we learn from them.

We are also continuing to lead our incredible team of midwives and medical assistants, going into mountain villages with them to build relationship and do checkups, as well as prenatal checks and births in our 24-hour clinic. Francis partners with local pastors and we're working together with them to serve and love our community. We have weekly bible studies in our home as well as Sunday worship gathering, where we love each other in deep and messy ways, and over pots of rice and soup, we share, pray and speak life and truth into each others souls.

As I (Leah) focus on homeschooling Julia (8), Avea (7), and Justice (5), I'm spending less time in the mountains and more time in the living room... our home has an open door policy and people trickle in, often drawn by a desire to take off their masks; a space to let the hurt out and healing in. We've asked the Holy Spirit to make our home an oasis of peace, a place where He hovers and meets with broken hearts. Over cups of coffee, with kids flying paper airplanes over our heads, more and more people are learning friendship with the Holy Spirit and their identities as sons and daughters who belong to the Good Father. Parents who have lost babies, men and women who have lost spouses, those who have had childhood trauma are coming to stay in our home, and somehow God is pouring out healing while they are here and letting us be part of what He is doing. This is what I love.

We're hosting mission teams regularly and the walls seem to stretch to accommodate teams of 5 or 25. There is beauty, airbeds, and peaceful pandemonium.

We are seeing healing in bodies and souls, and love being even a small part of it. In the middle of all this wonderful, we are migrating through deserts in our own hearts, fighting for deeper unity in marriage, being attacked spiritually, and through seeming unending sickness and health issues. Our hearts and bodies are tired.

Justice was diagnosed with Tuberculosis last year and he has finished his 6-month treatment. This week he has Pneumonia again, and as I hold him at night, nebulizing, back-rubbing, singing softly, he struggles to breathe and I realize that so do I because I have seen those pale lips before. Avea is also sick, with a White blood cell count of 22,000 (high normal is 10,000), and suspicious white lung areas on X-ray. We'll be doing further testing for TB.

Migraines and chronic fatigue pull me low, and my mind and heart sometimes feel tsunami-waves of fear casting shadows that I'm tempted to try to outrun. The bank account is low and the needs are mountainous.

This past week I've been on my face as every. single. pressure that has been humming is now a roar in my ears... I feel that waves are crashing and my chin is hovering above them.

But then The Holy Spirit speaks to me from Isaiah 43:

- <sup>2</sup> *When you pass through the deep, stormy sea,
you can count on me to be there with you.
When you pass through raging rivers, You will not drown. When you walk through persecution like fiery flames, you will not be burned; the flames will not harm you,*
- <sup>3</sup> for I am your Savior, Yahweh, your mighty God, the Holy One of Israel! I give up Egypt as the price to set you free, Cush and Seba in exchange to bring you back.
- <sup>4</sup> Since you are cherished and precious in my eyes, and because I love you dearly and want to honor you, I will willingly give up nations in exchange for you—a man to save your life.

He meets us in the middle of the deep...We will not drown. We will not be overcome. This season of wind and waves is not evidence that He does not hear or care for us, but proof that He does. He is taking us through deep waters to pull us into the Deep places of His love that we've never even imagined. I'm thirsty and I'm ready for the More.

There is a Poverty Spirit all around us, that says "There will never be enough. I must hoard and hold tightly and fight for what I need, but it will never be enough." God is my Father and He gives me Himself, the Spirit of Sonship that says "Even when I possess nothing, I have My Father and He has me, and with Him there is always enough. There is plenty."

He is taking us on a journey through the waves, not around them, so we can taste and see and deeply experience His heart and what it means to be His Son and Daughter, not His slaves. To intimately understand in our core that He is good.

If I am weary, wrung-out, striving to keep working hard enough, then I am walking as a Daughter who's working for the love of a fickle Father, instead of living from the Love of my accepting Father.

Francis, the kids and I are today asking the Holy Spirit to clear the clutter and wrong-thinking from our hearts, and pour rest, healing, freedom, and the Truth into every space. Only then we will be able to love each other, parent, lead, give, and serve well. Please pray for us.

Thank you to those who have stuck close even when we have not communicated or responded well, to those who continue to pray, encourage and support the ministry here. Thank you with everything in our hearts. We need you, we love you, and we have not forgotten even one of you. We pray for you by name and thank God for you.

At the moment we need approximately $1,500 more per month in support to continue all the arms of ministry that we are doing. If you want to give towards what is happening in Mindoro, or learn more, please check out our website. Grace and Peace, and all our love!

Francis, Leah, Julia, Avea, and Justice
